Wayne County to Host Winter Roads Press Preview

Live demonstration of new winter roads equipment, processes and procedures

Wayne County, MI – The weather outside may be getting frightful, and that’s exactly why Wayne County Executive Robert A. Ficano wants residents to be informed of what to expect from the roads division this winter season. Ficano will host an informational winter roads “what to expect” press forum Thursday, December 2 at 2 p.m. at the Wayne County Roads Division.

“With the weather beginning to change, we want to be sure residents are ready for the winter season, which includes understanding the county’s role in keeping residents safe,” Ficano stated. “With new efficiencies in equipment and process, we want to ensure residents are educated, informed and know what to expect when winter weather comes our way.”

The preview will include changes in process; detail of new tactics and procedures; response time/strategy; and information detailing new equipment and the efficiencies residents will see as a result. Also, information pertaining to the daily operations, including facts about what resources the roads division utilizes on an annual basis, such as the county maintaining 2,044 miles of state and county roads, will be discussed.

The preview will take place on Thursday, December 2, beginning at 2 p.m., at the Wayne County Roads Division located at 29900 Goddard in Detroit, 48242.
